CHURCHES REQUESTED TO CLOSE DOORS

Takes Drastic Action to Curb Grip Plague

The closing of all the saloons of Boston during the influenza epidemic was decided upon today by the Emergency Public Health Committee at a conference in the office of Mayor Peters. The committee will announce the date of closing later when the order of closing is sent out, it was stated.

At the same time the committee announced that the closing of all the churches of Boston would be requested as a precaution while the epidemic lasts.

ENDORSE OUTDOOR REMEDY.
"Fight influenza with fresh air and sunshine," has become a slogan throughout Boston and Massachusetts, following heavy official endorsement of the Boston AMERICAN's suggestion that the sun be lifted on "sunshine" Sunday while the malady rages. The slogan is being taken up by other cities.

The suggestion has been endorsed by State Public Administrator James J. Borror, who has asked National Food Administrator Garfield to permit auto riding on Sunday during the epidemic in order to get thousands of people into the pure air and sunshine, the most effective way of preventing the spread of the disease.

Physicians in charge of the various departments and districts heartily endorse the plan as a method of combating the spread of the disease. The public is urged to telegraph Mr. Garfield and their representatives in Congress and declare that such action is necessary as a health measure. Latest developments in the situation.

"SLACKER" RISK LEAD DOLLARS NEEDED IN NEW DRIVE

New Englanders Must Subscribe More Liberally to Make Their $500,000,000 Quota

New England must dig deeper and subscribe more liberally in order to maintain its prestige in the campaign now being waged for its quota of $500,000,000 for the "Fighting Fourth" Liberty Loan.

Larger subscriptions and more of them must be the rule during the remaining fourteen days of the big drive. No other course is compatible with good citizenship.

"Hurry up, New England; the nation is waiting to hear from you!" is the summons which today went out from Liberty Loan headquarters at No. 35 Milk street.

Information from Washington contained the sad tidings that the country as a whole is 50 per cent behind where it should be on the fifth day of the campaign. This admission from the Treasury Department was made public today. America's

British Cross Scheldt Canal and, Further North, Make Big Advance Toward Lille

By International News Service.
London, Oct. 4 (11:20 A. M.)

Local fighting which resulted to the advantage of the British, flamed up in the southern outskirts of Cambrai during the night, the War Office announced today.

The new British line is now less than seven miles from the great German base at Lille.

Fresh progress has been made by the British south of Ypres, and north of the Scheldt and the railway east of Lens has been reached.

The British also had the best of it in fighting southeast of Beaurevoir, where Austrians made the French-somme-British line hard fighting yesterday.

Four thousand German prisoners were taken in the fighting north of St. Quentin on Thursday.

The Germans made new counter attacks in an effort to recapture Gevel, Le Quesnoy and Beaurevoir, but all were beaten off.

All of the high ground northeast of St. Quentin, where the British made a successful attack on an eight-mile front of Thursday, has now firmly held by the British.

Both at Le Quesnoy and Gevel, where the Germans counterattacked, the British held their ground.

The British held the official report today reads:

"We have lost 4,000 prisoners yesterday north of St. Quentin."

"We have lost all of the high ground northeast of Beaurevoir."

"We have made more attacks on the German line."

Merchants who repair a plane will likewise go up with the pilot on the test flight; the required machine makes.

An Austrian destroyer, a transport, two submarines and other light craft were sunk. American submarine chasers took part in the attack.

The supplies destroyed in Durazzo are believed to have been intended for the Austrian army in Albania.

They were also told that 234 de Havilland planes were turned out during the past week, bringing the total production up to 1,694, while the production of Liberty motors now totals 8,216.

International News Service Cable Editor.

With the allies smashing the Germans and Austrians by land and sea, the Americans have started another drive upon a new front in the Champagne sector between Rheims and the Argonne forest. Attacking in conjunction with General Gouraud's French army, the Americans plunged northward along the Somme-Attigny highway, capturing the great German position on Mont Blanc which dominates the surrounding country.

An advance of several miles was made in a northerly and northwesterly direction and the progress still continues. Thus another "impregnable" German position, defended by veterans of four years' experience, was carried in a storm attack by America's young troops.

In addition to the fortified mountain, the Americans captured a strong German position on Medeah farm, three miles north of Somme Py, carrying all of their objectives in their first rush.

showed to come forward with increased subscriptions is attributed by Washington to the general optimism in America. Another reason for the slow news from the fighting fronts, which has been missing for some days, is that the country daily during the remainder of the campaign if the $6,000,000 total is to be reached.

On encouraging factors by the reports in hand is that the bonds of the Fourth Loan are being more widely distributed than those of any previous issue.

Grass has exceeded its quota by nearly 30 per cent. Industrial subscriptions to the fourth loan will have numerous than had been hoped for.

NEW! GET A MOVE ON! New England subscribed for only $2,500,000 of bonds on the first day of the drive. More than $25,000,000 a day must be forthcoming to carry the loan to success.

The grand total for the six States at the close of business Tuesday was $145,000,000 or but 25 per cent. of New England's quota of 50 per cent. of the allotted total of the Fourth Loan.

MAINE HAVE SUBSCRIBED. The number of individual subscribers represented in the day's total was 24,714, making in all 145,131.

THE LIBERTY LOAN COMMITTEE is endeavoring to bring home the tremendous task the New Englanders have to accomplish to secure the quota of $50,000,000 from the six States during the rest of the campaign. It is most severely handicapped by Massachusetts by the epidemic which has cut down on all meetings and parades. The committee has done its best to meet its responsibility in the matter. This has been accomplished when the buyer takes his bond, he must go further and sell his bond himself and above all wearing a blue button and do-

McADOO'S WARNING

Germany is not yet crushed. She has millions of strong fighting men still on the battle lines, and, with invasion of their own territory facing them, they will fight even more desperately than heretofore.

The Liberty Loan campaign is handicapped by two factors, the first being the unfortunate spread of influenza throughout many of the Eastern States, necessitating the cancellation of public meetings, parades and other demonstrations in behalf of the loan. This condition makes it necessary for the people to come forward with their subscriptions without waiting to be called upon.

The second unfavorable factor, and by far the most serious one, is the feeling which is prevalent in some communities that the glorious news from the battle fronts reflects a military situation which warrants a slackening of our efforts here at home. Nothing could be further from the truth, and no more insidious propaganda than this could be circulated by the enemy—Secretary McAdoo's warning on Liberty Loan campaign.

ing his utmost to bring home to everyone the very serious problem which New England faces.

BOSTON BIG PROBLEM. "The big problem in New England today," says chairman McAdoo, "is Boston itself. We have a quota of $12,000,000 to raise. This in itself is probably a stupor, but there are always millions of dollars which must be credited to towns and cities outside Boston. In the third Liberty Loan Campaign Boston raised $11,000,000, but of that amount $4,000,000 was credited to places near by.

While it is not necessary to raise a subscription in Boston of more than $1,000,000, it is necessary to raise a subscription in Boston of more than $1,000,000. The New England United Loan Committee has taken $1,000,000 of the loan for the New England United Loan Committee. The city of Boston has taken $1,000,000 of the loan for the New England United Loan Committee. The city of Boston has taken $1,000,000 of the loan for the New England United Loan Committee.

Merited Credit for Leary

Dr. Woods Hutchinson, one of the most distinguished men who write on medical subjects, discussed in yesterday's AMERICAN the influenza epidemic. In the course of his article Dr. Hutchinson says of the work of Dr. Timothy Leary, our medical examiner and professor at Tufts School:

Dr. Leary has vaccinated, within the past two weeks, nearly 2,000 persons, chiefly doctors, nurses and medical students who are specially exposed to the disease, with the gratifying results that less than one hundred of them developed the disease as far and all in very mild form, which is about five per cent. as compared with at least fifteen per cent. for the rest of the community and twenty to thirty per cent. among doctors and nurses who have not been protected.

Within the past ten days he has been supplying the vaccine to hospital and private physicians for use in the treatment of the disease, with encouraging results so far.

It is too early to say anything positive as yet, on the influence and the pneumonia following it vary so greatly in virulence in different cases, but one thing that I have seen strikes me as significant.

I have visited five of the larger hospitals of Boston within the last three days, in three of which no vaccine had been used and two of which had been giving it to their patients for a week to ten days. To put it very roughly, the three hospitals in which no vaccine had been used have had about 600 cases of influenza and pneumonia all told, with a death rate of about thirty per cent. for the past three weeks, the past week being as heavy and in one of them heavier than the first.

The two hospitals in which the vaccine has been used had had also a death rate of about thirty per cent. in nearly 200 cases for the ten days before it was administered, then for the ten days after its use began less than 150 cases with a death rate of five per cent., which is rather a striking and hopeful contrast.

Few in this community know the intense fervor of Dr. Leary's quest for antidotes to disease and his devotion and self-sacrifice in the work.

Let Us Make Fit Reprisal for German Vandalism

The Germans are burning French towns and cities in their retreat. There appears to be no imperative military necessity for this vandalism. It is unusual, and if it is not contrary to the established laws of war, it is because civilization, even military civilization, has assumed that unnecessary destruction of cities and towns need not formally be prohibited by the rules of war.

There has arisen discussion among the thoughtful men in France, England and this country whether or not some warning should not be sounded to the German leaders against a continuance of this devilish, wanton destroying. The AMERICAN believes very strongly that there ought not to be any hesitation on the part of the allies to make the German leaders understand that these blows below the belt are regarded as inexorable and will meet with reprisals in kind.

It has been suggested that certain German cities be designated by the allies as places that will be destroyed if the Germans continue their destruction of the French and Belgian cities. This is all very well. Certainly such towns ought to be designated and they ought to be destroyed if the Germans destroy another French or Belgian city. But that is not enough. We want to keep in mind the difference between the German people and the German autocracy and German military caste. This destruction comes, of course, by orders from the military leaders and political autocrats. It is, of course, not the spontaneous wantonness of the German people. This cannot relieve the German people from punishment for what they do under unreasoning submission to their leaders. But such punishment is not a restraint upon their leaders. Their leaders care nothing for the German people, except so far as a soldier cares for the horse that carries him and for any other instrument of war which he needs to give him power.

We ought to begin making reprisals where they will do the most good. When we make those who are responsible for the wicked conduct of the war, because they are the men who commanded the wickedness, responsible in their persons, we shall do a great deal more to stop this sort of thing than by merely reprisal upon a poor, submissive people, whose will-power and initiative have been disciplined out of them by forty years of training under the schoolmaster, the drill sergeant and the bureaucrat.

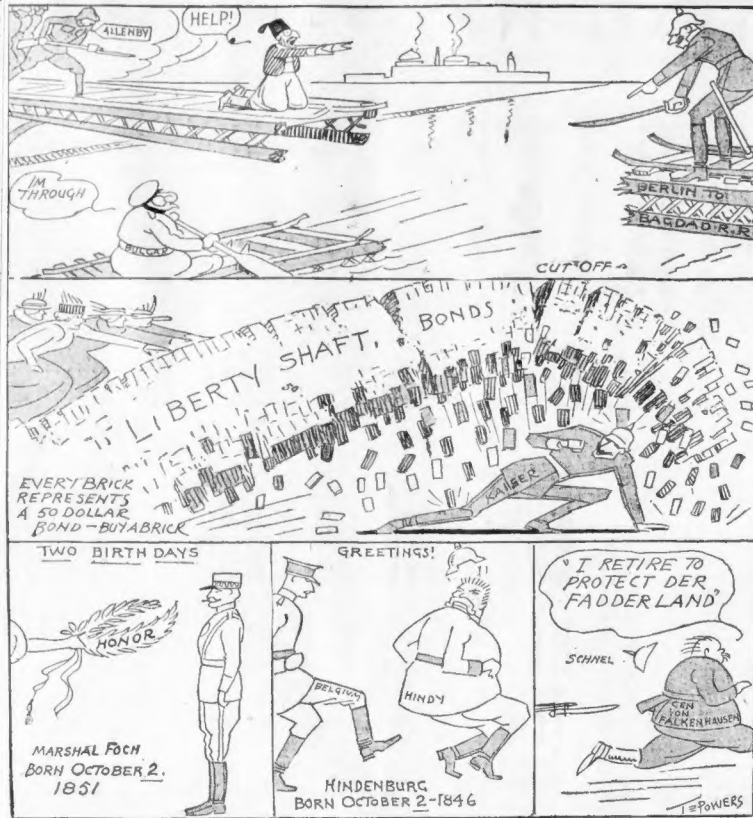

Apparently we need feel no qualms about condemning the destruction of the cities and towns in the wake of the German retreat. The destruction of these communities is out of all proportion to any possible military value to be obtained by it.

For generations the destruction of a town, except under the clearest military necessity, has not been tolerated as a decent method of waging war. This sentiment is so fixed in the minds of soldiers that they have often spared a city when its destruction had ample military warrant. Napoleon's conduct at Leipzig affords a classic example of the instinctive obedience of a soldier to the rules of decency in war. Napoleon had received his mortal wound at the battle of Leipzig, the Brutus stab had been given him by the desertion, in the middle of the battle, of 35,000 of his Saxon allies. Though he had thus lost the battle, his unskillful opponents would not have been able to inflict very great loss upon his army if he had been willing to burn Leipzig to cover his retreat. Professor Sloane, in his "Life of Napoleon," says, "He forbade his men to fire the suburbs of the city in order to retard the pursuit of their foes." Yet Leipzig was a Saxon town, and it was the treachery of Saxon troops that lost him the battle, lost him his crown and his power and his glory forever.

The German autocracy will not be moved by any threat to subject the German people to a vicarious atonement for their guilt. Millions of graves, and of legless, armless, sightless men are the evidence of a gigantic, vicarious atonement, which the German people are making for the faults of their rulers. Let us make reprisals upon the German towns, but let us make it also upon the bodies of the German leaders who are as guilty toward their own people as they are toward ours.

These Policemen Should Be Severely Punished

It is reported that the authorities in Somerville are investigating the alleged refusal of several members of the Somerville police force to transport in a police ambulance from their home to the hospital a mother and child suffering from influenza.

The alleged ground upon which this alleged refusal was based by the officers was that they did not want to bring the influenza into their own homes. If there is any ground at all for the report that these officers took the attitude they are alleged to have taken, and if they have no better reason than they are alleged to have given for their conduct, they ought to be summarily removed from the police force.

The men are not qualified for police work who take that attitude toward their public duties. It is an extraordinary thing that more than one man could be found in any single police force, however large, who has that view of his duty, and not only of his duty as a police officer, but of his duty as a man.

If there is a body of men in the whole world who, as a whole, are brave and self-sacrificing, and who do not in an emergency stand on the order of their technical duties, it is that body of our police in the several cities and towns of this State. It is doubtful whether in the whole State of Massachusetts there could be found two more policemen who take so low a conception of what becomes an officer and a man as is alleged to have been exhibited by these two men.

It is more than likely that the report is not true. But if it is true their punishment ought to be as severe as possible.

INKLINGS AND THINKINGS

Fall has officially begun. Both the year's and the Kaiser's.

Capture of 25,000 Turks made at least 100,000 temporary widows.

Bavarian prince is said to have taken a shot at Hindenburg, and missed him. Often heard of the man who couldn't hit a haystack, but Hindenburg is a bigger target.

Troops are fighting over the biblical Armageddon, but the big Armageddon is on the western front.

Bulgarian Car feels like the fellow who bets on a fighter and then watches his man taking it on the jaw.

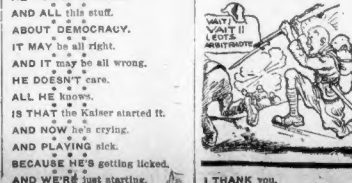

New York broker says he never heard of the income tax. Wonder if Columbus ever heard of America.

Kaiser recently saw a Liberty torpedo a transport. It was only a manoeuvre, of course, but Wilhelm, no doubt, could easily imagine it was a real hospital ship being sunk.

TORNADOES' FREAKISH RAMBLES STUDIED

By Garrett P. Serviss

"I read of a cyclone over Lake Winnepigosis which formed a funnel-shaped cloud, which drew up immense quantities of water that were later discharged from the cloud like a flood-burst. Kindly explain how a cloud forms in a funnel shape, and how it is powerful enough to draw up water!"
—P. A. F. C. Brough.

THE correct name of the kind of storm that you speak of is not cyclone but tornado.

By cyclone meteorologists mean general storms, accompanied by rain or snow, often a thousand miles in diameter, which extend over the whole country and whose winds have a combined motion of rotation around a centre, which gradually moves eastward or northward. But they give the name to the local whirling storms of great violence, which destroy houses, crops, trees and sometimes take a large toll of human life.

A characteristic

It is for refuge from these formations that the so-called "cyclone cellars" are built. A funnel-shaped cloud is characteristic of tornadoes and of their meteorological relatives, sometimes encountered as "water spouts." Its formation is due to the whirling of the air that occurs when atmospheric currents of widely different temperature encounter, and the warmer air rises rapidly, causing currents to flow in from all sides to take its place.

Thus the rising air at the centre assumes a motion somewhat like that of water pouring through an inverted funnel, the motion being upward instead of downward, and it whirles with a screwlike movement, just as water does when poured through a spout. When the disturbance of the air is on a small scale, and near the ground, the little "dust whirl" will be formed; but if the disturbance originates overhead, at a considerable elevation, where large air currents encounter, the whirling action appears to bore its way downward until it encounters the earth's surface, and then the form of the disturbed portion of the air is brought into view, as a funnel-shaped cloud, by the condensation of the atmospheric moisture.

There are well attested instances of storms weighing several hundred pounds being lifted from the ground and carried or rolled up-hill many rods. Houses on the Western prairies have been lifted bodily from the ground with their inmates. Cattle and horses have been whirled up high in the air and occasionally set down again almost unharmed.

In 1881 the United States Signal Service published a volume on the remarkable series of storms which occurred in May, 1875, in the States of Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri and Iowa, which make fascinating reading for anybody who is deeply interested in the wonders of nature, and there you may read descriptions by eye-witnesses of scores of surprising freaks perpetrated by the dark, whirling funnels which dropped from the heavens and whirled and squirmed about like "serpents suspended by the tail."

An Eyewitness
One man, who kept a cool head, and closely watched some of the passing storms, described the curious effects produced as a small distance away from the edge of the whirling cloud. Some of his experiences were almost uncanny.

For instance, while the storms were moving through the village of Irving, Kansas, there was experienced on their extreme edges an upward pressure which acted so powerfully as to apparently reduce a man's weight about two-thirds. It was necessary to hold your hat on, although you felt no sideways pressure against your body. Shavings and other light objects would ascend in a straight line for a considerable distance, and then dart with lightning rapidity downward to the base of the funnel cloud, then upward through its vortex and out at the top.

A Man Scared to Death.
100 Miles of Fighting.
How Near Are Americans?
Buy Explosions in Germany.
By Arthur Brisbane

Do not imagine, when you have a slight cold, that the Spanish influenza has got you. It is easy to frighten yourself into real illness.

As a practical joke a man was once strapped into a chair and told that he was to be bled to death. His feet were put in a pall of red-hot warm water, the back of a razor was drawn across the soles of his feet without cutting them. The man saw the red water, thought he was bleeding to death and died of fear, although he had not lost a drop of blood.

There will be millions of ordinary colds as usual this Autumn, and comparatively few cases of real Spanish influenza.

Take unusual care of every cold, but let no cold frighten you. All the European countries have had this influenza. They have not let it interfere with their activities. It hasn't been so very serious, and it won't be worse here than it has been there.

You read about the war on the western front.

To keep the great chain of war you would have to stand at the center of a battle line one hundred miles long.

Fifty miles to the left and fifty miles to the right you would see a continuous battlefront, millions of men fighting and killing in the front line, millions in reserve in the rear. You would see nine allied armies attacking the Kaiser all at once, all directed and controlled by the brain and will of the magnificent Frenchman, Foch.

There is the secret of the good news that you are reading.

Nine armies are fighting under one brain, and the defeat of Germany is as certain as that justice rules this world.

How near are the Americans to the Germans?

Near enough for American soldiers to make the enemy hear the place of news shouted over the trench tops: "Your friend Bulgaria has surrendered and we will get you soon."

How far forward do American fighters go?

Three hundred of them, far in advance of the main line, surrounded on all sides by German soldiers and weapons and ammunition that they carried with them, held their ground for days and, minus the killed, are again with their own army.

Your children missed the fireworks last July 4, and perhaps you did, too. Explain to them that the bond you are buying for them is used for fireworks where fireworks will do the most good.

One hundred dollars that you pay for one bond will buy one very big "T. N. S." shell. And that shell, well aimed, will send one hundred Prussians to a land better than the western front.

A hundred-dollar shell can make Prussians come from troubling at one dollar a head, buried under a cart. Begin celebrating part Fourth of July now, with fireworks paid for by you and exploded in Germany. Buy Bonds!

It is suggested that Foch, as a grateful tribute, be made a citizen of the United States. A polite Frenchman, he will accept gracefully any tribute well meant. And a proud Frenchman, he will tell that to be a citizen of France and do your duty toward humanity supplies all necessary glory in this world.

Every little French boy sings:

"Mourir pour la patrie, c'est le plus beau, le plus digne d'amour."

Every boy in France sings it, every Frenchman means it: "To die for France is the most noble fate, the most to be avoided."

The Danish newspapers say that Germany is crushed, and the American dollar in Denmark is worth $2.23.

Denmark apparently has not read Colonel Roosevelt's latest Liberty Bond speech in which he said: "This country is paying the price of unpreparedness."

Denmark apparently thinks, as do many Americans, that the Kaiser is showing better judgment now than when it took three to one that President Wilson was defeated two days after he had actually been elected.

Wall Street is willing to bet real substantial money that the war will end by January 1. Wall Street is showing better judgment now than when it took three to one that President Wilson was defeated two days after he had actually been elected. Wall Street's judgment, like other judgment, is sound when its own interest is not concerned.
